Izmir, the third biggest metropolitan area of Turkey, possesses a rich culture which has been shaped by the migrations of hundreds of years. Within these, the migration due to Greco-Turkish War and the Population Exchange of 1923 hold a unique place, as they have led to thousands of Turks originally residing in Crete and Thessalonica to immigrate to Izmir. These people have cultivated their identities into the culture of Izmir, which has been influential on the third and fourth generations. The proposed research aims to shed light upon the cultural identity of these immigrants and their descendants who reside in Izmir today.
